

Did you know?
The Wondrous Variety From The Hearty Olive

As you cross the Olive Route, you can savour three common and popular Olive varieties in Türkiye.

Domat, found throughout the Turkaegean, are larger olives with garlic, almonds, peppers, and cheeses. Also in the region is the green Memecik olives are mid-sized olives with a slightly oval shape. It offers a rich taste due to its high oil content.

Milas olive oil received recognition from the EU. The European Union registered it for a protected designation of origins and Türkiye's relationship with the olive is sacred. And getting in touch with nature along the route, you will soon discover why Türkiye is one of the top 5 olive producers in the world.

Join, cook, eat, repeat!

When venturing southwards to Aydin, the visitors can learn about the history of olives, meet the families who cultivate the olive groves, help with the harvest, and set their taste buds on fire with the olives and olive oil-based dishes to reflect on the connection between the land's olive and olive oil.

The story of the tree

Olive cultivation and olive oil production have been a part of this region's daily life and culture since ancient times. Travelling further down, on your way to Izmir, you may visit the tree of Kirkağac in Manisa. Izmir, the pearl of the Turkaegean, is considered among the most important centres of olive cultivation and oil in Türkiye. Here the Museum traces the 4000-year history of olive production.

Harvest Prayer

The Olive route is a journey and legume production, with coasts to two different seas. And the oil presses on the Turkaegean coast and beyond. A short visit to the Adatepe Olive Oil Museum in Çanakkale is how the route begins and where you may hear locals say "Harvest Prayer". Here you can see traditional crushing and extraction methods in their mill, which serves as the first Olive Oil Museum in Türkiye.

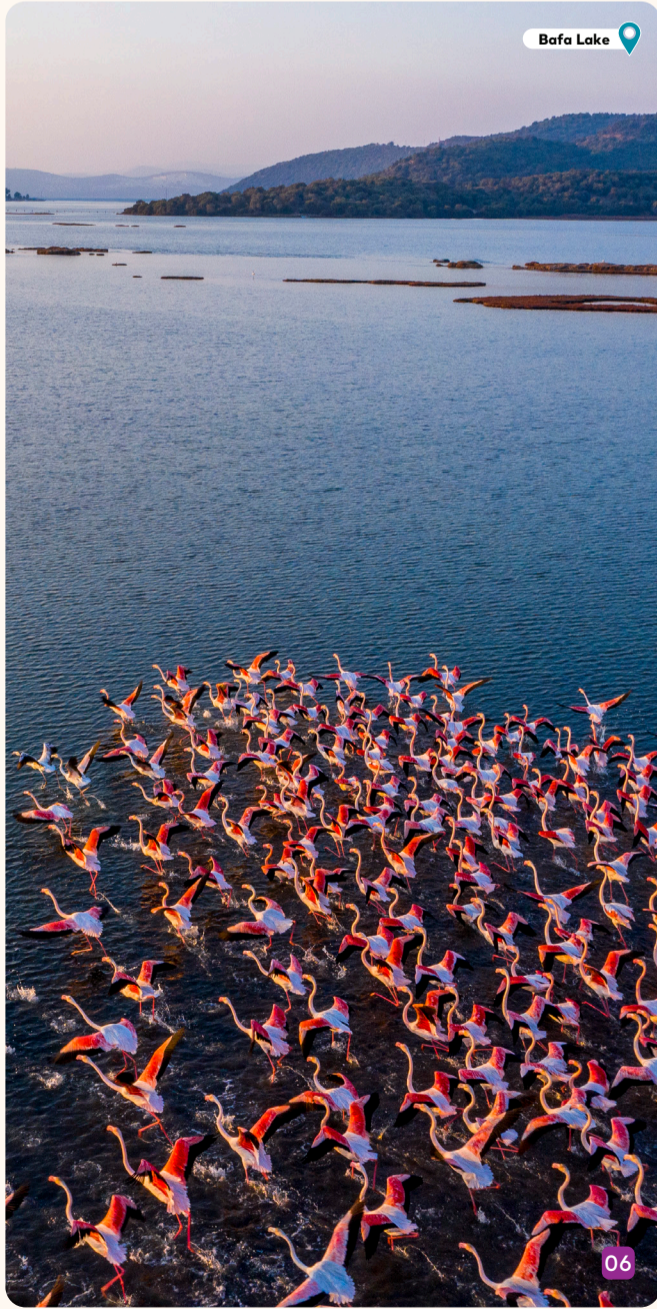

Travelling further inland, towards Balıkesir, the Ayvalık district is an important olive cultivation centre, with high-quality olives and olive oil. Balıkesir is located in critical geography for olives, grain
